

THE BRETON BOOSTER

RCMP WARN PUBLIC OF PHONE SCAM TARGETING SENIORS

RCMP would like to warn the public of a sharp increase in phone scams targeting seniors.

Scammers are contacting elderly individuals and pretending to be their grandchild. The imposter grandchild says that they have been in a collision where they are at fault, and have seriously injured or killed someone. They are being charged with “criminal negligence” or “vehicular manslaughter” and require $8,000 to $10,000 in cash bail. They will also state that they are injured too, and are being denied medical care until the bail is paid.

The call is then transferred to a person posing as a lawyer, who states that medical attention will be given to the grandchild once bail is paid, and that the charges will be dropped at the next court date. The “lawyer” will make attempts to arrange for payment, and offer that a bondsman can pick up a cash payment. They will also typically advise them not to tell anyone about the situation.

RCMP have already received several reports of this scam. It is important for the public to recognize the red flags:

- Ensure that your “grandchild” is able to identify themselves by their full name and provide other personal details before agreeing to anything
- The RCMP will not deny anyone medical care while waiting for bail
- The RCMP will not offer to drop charges in exchange for bail being paid
- The RCMP will not tell you to keep information like this a secret

Anyone who has fallen prey to this scam or other similar scams is asked to contact the RCMP.

For information on this and many other common scams, please visit the Canadian Anti-Fraud Centre at Canadian Anti-Fraud Centre www.antifraudcentre-centreantifraude.ca

Autumn

written by Tracy Bolton

Autumn comes in telling
The birds to get a grip
Its time you back your bags
To take a flighty trip 🍂
So here comes Mr Robin
With the little ones in tow
The Finches Wrens and Hatches
Fly with him don't you know 🐦
And off there go the Starlings
They were waiting for the wind
For when it comes a howling
Their journey then begins 🌬️
Then we see the flocks of Crows
And the Geese all in a V
Its heartwarming when we hear it
And an amazing thing to see ❤️
So when autumn comes a calling
And the birds all fly away
Wish them a safe journey
To come back again another day 😊

WARBURG BRANCH NO. 205 THE ROYAL CANADIAN LEGION

Dear Legion Members and Friends.

As members of The Royal Canadian Legion, our mission is to serve Veterans, including serving military and RCMP members and their families, to promote Remembrance, and to serve our communities and our country.

The legion exists so that we “Never Forget” their sacrifices, which have given us the freedoms that we enjoy each day.

Legion Branches are the cornerstone of communities across Canada and provide one of the largest volunteer bases in the country, helping Veterans, supporting seniors, providing youth Art & Literary programs & sports programs, raising funds, volunteering to help those in need, or simply offering a place to gather for fun and celebrating. Legionnaires provide essential services to their communities!

Warburg Branch No. 205 received its Charter in 1946. Since that time Veterans, their families and volunteers have worked hard to serve our Veterans and our community. At this time, our branch has come to the “Y” in the road. A big decision must be made to save our Legion Branch. This cannot be accomplished by a handful of members; we need your help! You do not need to be a family member of a Veteran to become a Legion Member, “Anyone can join the Legion!”

If we cannot recruit members to carry our branch into the future, we will have no choice but to “Surrender the Charter”. The outcome of such a decision will mean No Poppy Campaigns, No Remembrance Day Ceremonies, and No Poster & Literary contests for our students, as well as many other ways this will affect our community that had become regular events, Pub evenings with live entertainment, The Breakfast Special, and Theme dinners. There are groups who we have supported over the years, being youth advocates to The Cadet Program, Girl Guides of Canada to name a few.

We are asking you to put your heart and mind into the reason we are reaching out. Please, we are asking for your support and become a Legion Member to support the Legacy that we wish to continue.

We invite all members, community interest or general public to a Potluck Dinner at 5:00 PM on October 23, 2022 at The Warburg Legion followed by Crucial Decision Making Gathering! Please bring a dish of your choosing!

The flame never dies though, we WILL BE HOSTING REMEMBRANCE DAY SERVICE ON NOVEMBER 11, 2022, AT THE PIONEER AGRICULTURAL CENTER!

This will be followed by a Soup and Bun luncheon!

Along with this we will be in full swing with The Poppy Campaign featuring our very popular Poster and Literacy contests for all surrounding school, home school students!

Poppy Trays will be placed within the communities of Breton, Sunnybrook, and Warburg.

Our Popular Wreath Rental Program will be available for those who are interested in renting a wreath for representation of their business, community group or family designation.

There is a flame in our group to “Revitalize the Warburg Legion” by becoming an active part of The Warburg Legion” Activities that are being planned.

Of course, The Warburg Legion Hall is available for Rent for meetings, luncheons and functions, break-away for Hockey teams and other groups with great rates! Watch for further development on this!

We would like to Welcome all New Residents to Warburg and invite you to attend some of our events, we would love to meet all!

Watch out for our Events Calendar in all papers!

Yours in Comradeship

PIGOTT, Phyllis Doreen

August 17, 1932 - October 7, 2022

We sadly announce the passing of Phyllis Pigott (nee Bleakney) of Wetaskiwin, on October 7, 2022. Phyllis was surrounded by love before she passed away peacefully at the Wetaskiwin Hospital and Care Centre. She was born Phyllis Doreen Bleakney on August 17, 1932 in Calgary, Alberta. She had just recently celebrated her 90th birthday.

Phyllis's rich life touched so many. Her presence and the imprint she left on us will comfort and fill our hearts with memories. She was well known for both her wisdom and her wit. Her family and friends were blessed to learn many valuable lessons from her during her 90 years.

Phyllis was known to many as a dear friend and active community member. An extraordinary baker, she won countless accolades for her delicious pies. She was a dedicated member of both the Nakusp Hospital Auxiliary and the Wetaskiwin Royal Canadian Legion Ladies Auxiliary.

Not a day went by where Phyllis didn't talk about how much her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren meant to her-- family was arguably the most important achievement in her life.

Phyllis was predeceased by parents, Arnold and Shirley Bleakney; brothers, Gordon and Clifford; sisters, Lorraine, Helen and Lorna and her son-in-law, Ron Carey. She is survived by her three sons, Lloyd (Christine) and Dean (Leona) Wilson, Jim Pigott and her daughter, Billi Carey; grandchildren Jaime, Christopher, Lacy, and Jody and three precious great-grandchildren, Carter, Asher, and Sawyer; and her sister, Gladys Fontaine.

Donations in Phyllis's memory are gratefully accepted to the "Wetaskiwin Hospital Foundation", note/memo: Wetaskiwin Auxiliary

A celebration of her life will be announced for the spring of 2023.

WHEN ARE KIDS READY FOR SOCIAL MEDIA?

Article from www.childmind.org

Submitted by Jennifer Olson-Ross, CYC, B.A. (Psych.) Family Wellness Worker for Breton Elementary and High School.

Note from Jennifer - "As you may already be aware the Alberta ICE (Integrated Child Exploitation) unit has sent out an alert to all parents and caregivers about the escalated incidents of child exploitation occurring on various social media sites. Despite previous alerts to the public, these incidents are continuing to increase. This article helps parents and caregivers navigate social media sites that their children are wanting to access. I think it is important to try and get this information out there."

Since kids are so quick to pick up on digital technology, it can be a big job for parents to keep up with them — monitoring what they're accessing in the way of games, music, videos, photos, and websites. But for many, the biggest challenge is when to let kids have access to social media. And how much access?

Kids crave contact with their friends and peers, and social media has become an important way for them to interact. For children who are isolated, it can be a lifeline. But it also has the potential to become addictive, to get them into trouble, and to harm fragile self-esteem.

Pressure on parents

Kids often start pushing for access to social media in late elementary and early middle school, and parents feel pressured to allow it because they don't want their children to feel left out. But delaying social media immersion helps ensure that they will be more mature about what they post, more able to resist its addictive appeal, and less vulnerable to emotional harm.

Max Stossel, the founder and CEO of Social Awakening, a group that promotes healthy use of social media, has talked to groups of parents, students, and educators about the impact of technology on kids for more than 10 years. Stossel says he always asks parents to raise their hands if they wish they had given their kids access to social media sooner. "I am still waiting for the first parent to tell me they wish they had given it sooner," he says. "And that's thousands of parents. But many, many say they're glad they waited."

Stossel notes that social media algorithms are designed to maximize profits, not to benefit kids. "Eleven-year-old kids are just too young to have these supercomputers pointed at their brains, often preying on their self-image, or their hormones, to keep their attention."

Stossel endorses a parent movement called Wait Until 8th that advocates delaying exposure to social media until kids are in eighth grade. "And eighth grade is the minimum, I would say. Research shows that 10- to 14-year-old girls are hit hardest by this. I would wait until 15, 16, but that has just seemed less and less realistic for a lot of parents' lives and kids' lives."

Choosing the right time

The best timing for each child depends not just on their age but their maturity, and kids develop at different rates. "I could introduce you to a really mature 13-year-old and a really immature 17-year-old," notes Jerry Bubrick, PhD, a clinical psychologist at the Child Mind Institute.

When they are ready will depend on things like their ability to read social cues, their impulse control, and their vulnerability to criticism or rejection. If a tween has a particularly hard time disengaging from continually stimulating things like video games, they might have trouble resisting the rabbit hole of social media.

Dave Anderson, PhD, a clinical psychologist at the Child Mind Institute, suggests that introducing social media in middle school gives parents the opportunity to supervise their initial exposure as a condition for the privilege of using the app. "If you wait until high school to give permission, they're not likely to let you monitor their social life. You will never know what their online world looks like. And you will never be able to kind of navigate that with them."

Monitoring kids on social media

Experts agree that parental oversight is crucial when kids are starting to use social media.

"Initial access should come with a lot of talk beforehand and a parent saying, 'Here's what I consider to be acceptable and unacceptable behavior,'" Dr. Anderson explains. "And also 'I want to go on Instagram with you, look at some of your friends' accounts, and we'll talk about what is acceptable or unacceptable about what they're doing with their accounts.'"

Dr. Bubrick encourages families to go one platform at a time, and monitor what kids are posting. "So parents are really kind of helping their kids learn the do's and don'ts rather than parents just hoping they'll figure it out."

Parental oversight should also pay attention to the balance in the child's life, Dr. Bubrick adds. "There's a dedicated time for social media. But it's only part of your day because you also have to be out face-to-face with friends, and you have to be exercising, and you have to do homework. So really teaching our kids how to have balance with social media is just as important in my point of view as helping them learn what's appropriate and inappropriate to post."

Rules for social media access

Families vary about what they want kids to be allowed to do on social media, but parents can make it clear to kids that access is contingent on following rules. Some parents set rules limiting who their kids can interact with, some on what kinds of things they can post.

For many, the cardinal rule is not to post anything they wouldn't say to a person face-to-face, or want adults in their lives to see. "Tell kids they should act as if their parents are reading almost everything they post," says Dr. Anderson. "And if that's not enough of a deterrent to oversharing or acting impulsively, explain that they shouldn't post anything they wouldn't be comfortable having their grandparents read."

Dr Anderson notes that some parents are drawing the line on posting selfies. "A lot of families are making that decision because selfies invite judgment of just you and how you look, and that can be damaging to kids' self-esteem" he explains. "If you post pictures of you and your friends hanging out by the lake, you get comments like, 'Wish I was there. Oh my gosh, you guys are looking like you're having so much fun.' But if you post a selfie in a bikini, you're asking followers to decide whether or not they like your clothing or your appearance."

Likewise, he adds, it's important to have well-defined consequences for not following the rules, for example, "As long as you're ok with the no-selfie rule, we can keep Instagram, but if you break it we'll have to delete the app."

Dr. Bublick recommends prompting kids to think through who they are sharing with as well as what's appropriate to share. "How are you defining who's a friend online and what are you willing to share with them?"

Parental controls

Major social media platforms like TikTok, Instagram, and Snapchat have rolled out a series of parental control settings as an answer to parents' concerns about their kids' exposure. Not only has TikTok launched a new dashboard where users can now monitor and set limits on their screen time, but they've also added a Family Pairing setting. Once parents link their account to their child's, they can control all privacy settings for their child's account. Parents can also restrict the types of videos that can come up on their feed, limit screen time, limit or turn off comments and likes, and turn off direct message (this is automatically disabled for kids ages 13 to 15).

The Family Pairing setting is password protected and even if the child manages to disable it, parents will be sent a notification.

While TikTok's settings appear to be the most expansive in their restriction abilities, Instagram and Snapchat have launched similar settings. Instagram has also separately given the option of limiting or completely turning off comments and likes.

Alternatively, if parents aren't comfortable with their child having their own account but still want to give them the freedom to express themselves online, they can create a joint account and engage in the content with them. On TikTok and Instagram, there are several family accounts in which the parents create, control, and appear in the videos or photos alongside their children. Often the comments on these accounts are limited or even shut off to shield children from unwanted scrutiny. There are also more kid-friendly apps such as Funimate and Triller that allow users to create and edit fun videos without the immediate option of sharing their content with an outside audience.

Stossel recommends the parental control tool Bark, which monitors a child's activity on social networks, as well as YouTube, email and text messages. It filters for the signs of harmful content, including sexual material, threats of violence, depression, suicidal ideation, and bullying. Parents get email and text alerts if there is something concerning in the child's online activity. It can also be used to limit screen time and to block individual websites.

Screen Time is another tool that allows you to set time limits on daily screen time, block out periods when screens are not to be used, and includes categories of sites and individual URLs.

Kids who are vulnerable

For kids who are struggling with emotional issues, parents need to be aware that the algorithms in social media apps can read their mood and reinforce it.

"Social media is built to feed you content you're more and more interested in," says Dr. Anderson. "If you have a kid who's depressed, the algorithm will feed them content that aligns with their mood. If you've got a kid who's anxious, the algorithm will feed them the content that aligns with their dominant emotional state. And if you've got a kid who has ADHD and is looking to be distracted, the algorithm will feed them distraction."

While the majority of kids are not necessarily harmed by what they see on social media, it's not always clear to parents if a child is depressed or anxious, so Dr. Anderson recommends careful monitoring and use of guardrails. "The reality is that for kids who are already in a vulnerable mental health population, consuming social media alone is a real risk factor. It can really affect them."

Soul Care

In the month of October, we acknowledge Mental Health Awareness Week. According to the Canadian Mental Health Association, in any given year, one in five Canadians will experience a mental health problem or illness.

Mental Health concerns are not going away...or getting better and it is time to take our mental health seriously.

Many times, we feel we may not have anyone to talk to or that we should 'just get over it'. Please stop, and take note of how you are feeling, if you are struggling, I encourage you to seek care.

Statistics tell us that we are all struggling in some way.

This past June while in Poland working on the border for Ukrainian relief work, I sensed that alongside the physical things that were needed such as food and shelter, having someone to listen and care for their story was just as important.

We all need space to be able to share our stories. It is in this space that helps us on our journey towards healing.

I came across a great message the other day by #raisedtostay to help us see that it is OK to say we need care...that God loves us no matter what.

"You can go to counselling and still trust Jesus. You can take medication and believe in healing. You can have a spiritual director and be led by the Holy Spirit. You can seek medical advice and know the Great Physician. You can see a therapist and be confident God is able. God is not in competition with your counsellors or intimidated by your medication. Mental Health matters to our Father...He heals, by His hand and through the hands of skilled professionals."

Amen.

It is OK to reach out and get the help you need. If you know someone who is struggling or if you are struggling, please reach out. You are not alone.

ASSOCIATE MINISTER OF STATUS

HOMENIUK ISSUED THIS STATEMENT
RECOGNIZING THE 10TH
INTERNATIONAL DAY OF RURAL WOMEN:

"Today we highlight and thank women living in rural areas for their steadfast spirit, determination and passion. These women are farmers, small business owners, tradespeople, first responders and more.

"Rural women play a critical role in ensuring families around the world have access to nutritious food. According to the United Nations, women make up more than 40 per cent of the agricultural labour force in developing countries. Here in Alberta, a third of our farmers are women.

"With digital connectivity an economic priority, rural women in Alberta are increasingly turning to online resources to find farming solutions, engage with larger agricultural-related communities and reach potential customers. That's why Alberta's Broadband Strategy, a four-year commitment to improve access to high-speed internet in rural, remote and Indigenous communities, is vital. Funding for the first 50 communities was announced just last month, ending the digital divide in more than 10,000 homes across the province.

"Alberta's government has also made it easier for women entrepreneurs to access capital loan funds. It is my hope that this funding will enable women entrepreneurs to grow their businesses and encourage even more women to become successful in rural Alberta.

"I encourage all rural women to access the Women's Hub, a one-stop shop for services and resources that can help women succeed at work, home and in the community.

"Rural women are integral to Alberta. Their hard work and dedication will continue to sustain our province into the future."

Breton Word of Faith CHURCH

LEARNING TO LIVE IN THE POWER OF GOD

Some key thoughts from the Bible:

- God loves us all!
- He is here to save us:
 - In eternity (heaven),
 - In issues we face in this present life.
- He does this through our relationship with Him. We each have our own role to play.
- Friends, spiritually speaking, we cannot just sit back and hope for the best. Many things happen in this life that are unfortunate and not part of God's good will for us.
- Church is about learning our role and pro-actively participating in relationship with Him.
- We are learning to live in the power of God.
- We are learning to live in His love.
- His love is a caring, positive, affirming environment.

Laurie's Laughs

Wife said, "Our new neighbours are so in love. He kisses her, strokes her hair and hugs her. Why don't you do that?"
I said, "Because I don't know her that well yet"

One thing no one ever talks about when it comes to being an adult is how much time we debate keeping a cardboard box because it, you know... a really good box.

Potatoes make french fries, chips, and vodka. It's like the other vegetables aren't even trying.
